Throughout history, Native American women have played vital roles in their communities and made significant contributions to society as a whole. From warriors and activists to artists and educators, these women have defied stereotypes and triumphed over adversity to make a lasting impact on the world.

In the book 100 Native American Women Who Changed the World, author Dr. Michelle Jacob presents the stories of 100 extraordinary women who have made their mark in a variety of fields. These women include:

- Pocahontas, a Powhatan woman who played a key role in the early history of the United States

- Sacajawea, a Lemhi Shoshone woman who served as a guide and interpreter for the Lewis and Clark Expedition
- Nancy Ward, a Cherokee woman who fought for the rights of her people and helped to negotiate peace treaties with the United States government
- Sarah Winnemucca, a Paiute woman who was a vocal advocate for Native American rights and education
- Maria Tallchief, an Osage woman who was one of the most acclaimed ballerinas of the 20th century
- Wilma Mankiller, a Cherokee woman who was the first female chief of the Cherokee Nation
- Louise Erdrich, an Ojibwe woman who is one of the most celebrated Native American authors of all time
- Suzan Harjo, a Cheyenne and Hodulgee Muscogee woman who is a leading advocate for Native American rights
- Joy Harjo, a Muscogee Creek woman who is the first Native American U.S. Poet Laureate

These are just a few of the many Native American women who have made a difference in the world. Their stories are an inspiration to us all, and they remind us of the strength, leadership, and resilience of the Native American people.

If you are interested in learning more about the remarkable women featured in 100 Native American Women Who Changed the World, I encourage you to check out the book. It is a powerful and inspiring read that will stay with you long after you finish it.
