

68 Vampires, Mad Scientists, and Other Denizens of the Late Night Airwaves

A Journey Through the History of Late-Night Radio

Late-night radio has always been a place for the strange and unusual. From its humble beginnings in the early 1900s, when it was used to broadcast news and weather updates, late-night radio has evolved into a haven for horror, science fiction, and other macabre genres.

In the 1950s and 1960s, late-night radio was at its peak. Stations across the country would broadcast horror and science fiction shows, often hosted by eccentric personalities who would adopt strange voices and sound effects to create a truly immersive experience for their listeners.

Some of the most popular late-night radio shows of this era included:

- The Shadow
- The Inner Sanctum
- Lights Out
- Dimension X
- The Twilight Zone

These shows featured a wide range of stories, from classic horror tales to suspenseful crime dramas. They were often narrated by some of the most recognizable voices in radio, including Orson Welles, Vincent Price, and Boris Karloff.

Late-night radio began to decline in the 1970s, as television and other forms of entertainment became more popular. However, there are still a few late-night radio shows that continue to broadcast today, such as Coast to Coast AM and The Mothman Prophecies.

68 Vampires, Mad Scientists, and Other Denizens of the Late Night Airwaves is a journey through the history of late-night radio. This book tells the stories of some of the most colorful characters to ever grace the airwaves, and it explores the unique appeal of this often overlooked genre.
