PAKISTAN'S TRADE WITH AFRICA: PECULIARITIES AND ROAD AHEAD

Ayame Rashid and Arshad Jatoi

Abstract

Pakistan's Look Africa Policy initiative is required to take benefit from the African region in these times when African states want to establish good economic and diplomatic relations and create for themselves a comfortable niche in the African trade and development. Pakistan should not overlook the pre-existence of active courses (functionalism and federalism) to adequately proceed with economic prospects and opportunities. The book must stipulate that concrete and palpable positive initiatives can be cherished. While expediting ahead on the economic scene, it is necessary to shed light on the role of Morocco in CPEC and the possibility of investment in Pakistan. The paper explores the history of Pakistan's relations positively in the search for a better future together. This is a research of the kind and nature of relations that can be potentially developed between Pakistan and Africa to reveal the natural potential of both.

Keywords: Africa, Pakistan, Look Africa Policy, Trade, CPEC.

Introduction

A recently held conference on January 20-21, 2014, in Kenya (East Africa), commonly known as the Horn of Africa, allowed bringing more than 200 delegates from all over the African region under one roof for the first time to find ways of connectivity and cooperation with Pakistan.¹ In this high profile conference, Pakistan's Foreign Minister Shah Mahmood Qureshi told the media that Somalia had asked Pakistan to extend its "Look Africa Policy Initiative" with the states of Horn of Africa generally and with Somalia in particular.² The case understudy analyses prospects for Pakistan to be actively involved in the region. It did not happen all of a sudden that the African state asked for help; Pakistan has a long history of relations with several African states that are discussed in detail. The economic framework is yet quite evasive between Pakistan and Africa. To proceed smoothly, Pakistan must assume formlessness to avoid fall between two cracks. Constant adaptability to the market trends is significant in the way forward. This paper, therefore, assesses challenges and opportunities for Pakistan in the region. It also suggests some policy measures to Pakistani policymakers to get the best out of the opportunity.

Political stability and economic development are essential phenomena. Pakistan and Africa have several things in common but unfortunately, one of them is
