One sunny morning, as Don Magnolia's class settles down for their nature lesson, an unexpected guest makes a grand entrance – an enormous alligator! The children are thrilled and can't wait to get up close and personal with the fascinating creature.

But hold on there, little ones! Don Magnolia has a very important rule: no alligators in school.

Despite their disappointment, the children understand that rules are in place for a reason. They learn that alligators, though beautiful and majestic, belong in their natural habitat and not in a classroom.
